

Macmillan Breast Clinical Nurse Specialist (CNS) and Key worker information

Macmillan Breast Nursing Service

It can be very frightening for you and your family/carer to be told that you have breast cancer so it can be helpful to talk to someone outside of your immediate family.

The Macmillan Breast CNS is available to listen to your concerns and provide support and information for both you and your family/carer. This service is available from your initial diagnosis, throughout your treatment and follow-up, until no longer wanted or required.

It is not unusual to be unable to think of any questions at the time of the clinic appointment. If you think of any questions when you have left the hospital write them down as they come to mind and bring them with you when you next come to the hospital.

The Macmillan Breast CNS also provides information and support to enable you to make informed decisions regarding your treatment options.

When attending clinic appointments for results or to make treatment decisions a Macmillan Breast CNS will be present. It is a good idea to bring a relative, friend, carer with whom you feel comfortable to these appointments with you.

Whilst you are in hospital a Macmillan Breast CNS will visit you on the ward and once you have been discharged the breast CNS team is only a telephone call away. As the nurses may be out of the office there is a voicemail service, and it is important that you do leave a message and your call will be answered as soon as possible.

When attending subsequent follow up appointments the Macmillan Breast CNS can be contacted via the clinic nursing staff if required.

What is a Key Worker?

Whilst you are being cared for one of the Macmillan Breast CNS will act as your key worker. If your CNS is not available, one of the other CNSs will be able to speak to you.

If your care is transferred to another department your key worker may change. We will let you know if this happens.

Appointments

The Macmillan Breast CNS can see you and your family/carer outside of the clinic setting for any reason and this can be arranged directly with their breast care nurse.
